

Changing Society and Alternatives in Educational Provision

The provision of schools is changing due to social changes such as declining birth rates and the increasing spread of marketization. To discuss the challenges and possibilities of alternative school supply, a research exchange between Japan and Germany will be held.

Date and time: 28 February 2024 (Wednesday),
10:00 am - 12:00 pm

Place: Room 306, Graduate School of Education,
Tohoku University

Language: English/Japanese (with simultaneous interpretation)

Please bring your own earphones and a PC or smartphone with Zoom app if you wish to use simultaneous interpretation.

Program:

Satoru INAGAKI (Graduate student, Graduate School of Education, Tohoku University)

“How do parents and their children access schools and satisfy their needs? : A case study of specially chartered schools in Japan”]

Rita Nikolai (Rita Nicolai, Professor of Comparative Education, University of Augsburg)

“Private School Development in Germany: Private Schools as Drivers of Social Segregation”

Co-organized by:

Centre for Innovation in Educational Research and Practice, Graduate School of Education, Tohoku University

JSPS Grants-in-Aid for Scientific Research (C) “Reexamination of the Concept of Public Education through a Japanese-German Comparison of the Expansion of Private Schools at the Compulsory Education in Underpopulated Areas” (23K02129) (Principal Investigator: Yoshihiro IMOTO)